Associate in Arts in Anthropology for Transfer

The Associate in Arts in Anthropology for Transfer degree enables students to develop a foundation in qualitative and quantitative scientific methodologies and a comprehensive understanding of human diversity and complexity.

Students take classes in three of the discipline's primary subfields: archaeology, cultural anthropology, and physical anthropology.

Through these courses, students cultivate strong critical thinking, communication, and problem-solving skills that will prepare them for the requirements of upper-division course work and a baccalaureate degree in Anthropology (or in a related major).

Program Learning Outcomes

- Students will demonstrate in written or oral work, or lab exercise, knowledge and application of the scientific method, and the development of cultural and biological theory about humans.
- Students will classify universal shared elements of culture and assess alternative ways that human groups meet needs for stability, reproduction, and social control.
- Students will identify ethnocentrism (centered in one's own culture) in self and others and assess the effects of ethnocentrism on cross-cultural relations among individuals, groups, and nations.
- Students will name and describe living patterns and world views of several groups in the world today as well as that of their own group.
